1. At the Dózsa György Infantry Barracks on Bagolai Street in Nagykanizsa there is a Hungarian motorized rifle regiment, with all three of its battalions. It is commanded by Lt. Col. László Szendi. There are about 1,600 men, wearing green shoulder boards and insignia. Each platoon has a Degtyarev light machine gun. Each battalion has six Maxim heavy machine guns and four 82 mm mortars. The regiment also has 120 mm mortars, 57 mm AT guns and AA machine guns. The auto park consists of 74 or 76 trucks and two passenger cars.
2. There is a motorized artillery regiment in the Gábor Áron Artillery Barracks on Petöfi Gasse. The 1st Section has three batteries with a total of twelve 122 mm howitzers. Two of the officers are Capt. Imre Tátrai and Lieut. Sándor Hríkos. There is a heavy machine gun platoon with four guns. The 2nd Section is also armed with twelve 122 howitzers. The 3rd Section has twelve 76.2 mm guns. Both 2nd and 3rd Sections have a heavy machine gun platoon like the 1st. The auto park consists of 32 prime movers of various types, 5 Tatra passenger cars and 18 Csepel Diesel trucks. The regiment has about 1,400 men. They wear red shoulder boards and insignia. The regiment undergoes infantry training in the courtyard of the barracks and at Hosszúvölgy. Field exercises are carried out near Ihárosberény and Hegyécse.
3. The Petöfi Barracks is at Teleki Gasse 82. It holds a communications battalion, almost fully motorized. There are 430 to 440 men, wearing dark blue shoulder boards and insignia. The battalion is organized according to regulation and equipped with telephones and radios, including an especially large number of small radios. It has two Tatra passenger cars and sixteen 3-ton trucks of
